

Dear FCC Official,

Please do not weaken the WI "No Call List" legislation. My wife and I are both professionals and before the "No Call List" was available we were inundated by unwanted and unsolicited calls. We went as far as taking the handset off the receiver during the dinner hour just so that we could eat in peace. This practice however, made us unavailable to family members in the event of an emergency. Signing up for the "No Call List" was a perfect solution for us.

I firmly believe that it is not someone/some businesses God given right to contact me via a service that I am paying for. For people who want to be solicited in this manner, they certainly have the right to not submit their names to be included on the "No Call List. If the WI law is changed I will seriously consider cancelling my LAN line and going strictly to cell phone to avoid these aggravating, unwanted and unsolicited sales pitches. Believe it or not, as a society we are all relative intelligent human beings. If I (we) want a credit card, long distance service, replacement windows, etc., I (we) know who to contact or I will use the Yellow Pages. When I am not in the market for such products I do not want people interrupting my day to see if would/could possibly change my mind.

Sincerely,

Bob Kaiser
